Keeping the seminary running each day is like running a small village. The buildings require year-round work on administrative offices, classrooms, dorms, and faculty housing. In addition, our beautiful park-like 80 acres of roads, grass, trees, and landscaping takes diligent stewardship.

Our technology infrastructure is consistently upgraded to accommodate online courses, live streaming, and real-time video calls with international presenters. A recording studio allows our professors to enhance their virtual offerings and expand the ways we are able to serve and reach students.

While the professors play an integral role in equipping the men who will eventually equip God's people, we also have seventeen staff members who work in administration, continuing education, mission advancement, food service, and building and grounds—all to support our mission.

The Seminary Fund also supports the students' education off campus. Thorough preparation requires giving students opportunities to take what they've learned and practically apply it in field experiences.
